Work is fundamental to human nature and its expression; it's how we realize our destiny in this world. The lack or loss of employment has the power to erode a sense of personal dignity and self-worth, and creates a population of economically vulnerable families.

The Archdiocese of Milwaukee is proud to be one of more than 20 organizations throughout Milwaukee County that has joined forces to provide help to the unemployed. As part of the Milwaukee Transitional Jobs Collaborative, the group's next directive is to help identify potential new employers to provide transitional jobs to adults struggling in these tough economic times.

What are transitional jobs? They're real jobs which provide workers an opportunity to learn a skill, gain experience, and earn pay. Transitional jobs are subsidized through a national or state grant, and typically last for a period of three to six months. But most important, transitional jobs offer hope and the opportunity to transform lives in positive ways.

SPREAD THE WORD!

Our goal is to educate attendees about the transitional jobs program with the hope that potential employers can be identified. Do you make hiring decisions (or know someone who does)? If so, register to attend the webinar!
